MENEX WILL PROSECUTE HOPELESS OVER ILLNESS, SICKLY WIFE AND SELF

JOHN J. ATTRIDGE of the Boston City Council and his bride, Margaret Helen Roche, married at the Cathedral today.

JAP PRINCESS POURS TEA AT LYNN FESTIVAL

Never were so many pretty girls, so many brave and amusing attractions, and so many rare rarities offered at any charity affair as at the festival of the East. The A. E. Little, today, when a wonderful feast for the joint benefit of those two most deserving charities—a children's ward in the Lynn Hospital and the Woman's Industrial Laundry—was held, and over 2,000 people thronged the estate to contribute their respective mites to making it the most wonderful feast ever.

It was largely day every minute, and the seat of every woman there was made happy with the wonderfully beautiful and useful articles she bought at such "greatly reduced prices."

Dr. Hurley Married to Isabel B. Walsh

Miss Isabel Bishop Walsh, 145, Pleasant street, Dorchester, was today married to Dr. Edward D. Hurley, a surgeon in the 5th Regiment in the Peter's church, Meeting House Hill, the Rev. Father T. J. Lyons, vicar of the Church of the Holy Spirit, officiating, assisted by Rev. Michael J. Deane, Rev. Edward O'Brien, and Rev. John St. Meeting of Boston College.

COUPLE TRAGEDY CAFE

Howard Street in Upstairs as Medford Man Shoots Wife and Himself.

DESPONDENT OVER ILLNESS

Because his young wife had taken steps towards a legal separation, Joseph Nazario, thirty-two, a well-to-do work and the gone in consumption, from her sister, Mrs. Annie E. Roche, as well as work of employment in the West End today and then turned the revolver upon himself.

The young wife felt mortally wounded. The surgeons said she might live an hour or two. They also gave Nazario up for dead.

Unremitting and unrelenting illness, their acquaintances say, together with the fact that tuberculosis had marked the man for its victim, are advanced as motives for the crime.

The Nazarios were married some years ago, at St. Leonard's church in the North End. The bride was Miss Anne, then a beauty of eighteen. Nazario was industrious, but careless of his health, which finally became so poor that about a year and a half ago he had to give up work.

Three little daughters had come to bless the union: Mildred, age seven; Gladys, eight; and Louise, ten years. Their father was wrapped up in them. His wife, indeed, said to have been lured rather than the death of separation from the girls than the impending loss of their mother.

For a long time the Nazario family was supported by Giuseppe Nazario, with whom they made their home at No. 36 William street, in Medford.

One day, however, Mrs. Nazario's brother-in-law, Philip Nazario, offered her a place as the cashier of his cafe, located at No. 27 Howard street.

Mrs. Nazario took the place with the understanding that, in addition to her own meals and wages, Nazario, the consumptive, should also have his meals there.

His Jealousy Aroused.
The arrangement seems to have worked satisfactorily until Nazario noticed the popularity of his wife with the male patrons of the cafe. The young man all stopped for a pleasant word or two with the good-looking woman. Then, when joking back and forth, the woman laughing gaily, Nazario said at last at his table near his coffee, anger sparkling from his coal-black eyes.

Shot Ends Chase for Wild Steer

Automobiles Run Down Animal That Escapes from Slaughter Pen.

A steer on its way to the slaughterhouse broke away early today in southern city, in a short time, after the animal had chased it two miles, it was captured and shot.

The steer was in a corral at the New England Dressed Meat and Wash Company's plant. When it saw the door of the slaughterhouse about it, it burst the wall of the runway and broke out on Medford street, thence to Washington, and charged past the Pope School, scattering the children.

Neat Portman Square, Cambridge, Fred Lincoln, an expression, drove his wagon alongside the just past and dropped a stone over its head. They then jumped out and climbed the surrounding a highway. The steer was badly frightened. Joseph Murphy, an employee of the company, drove up, took his double-barreled rifle and in slaughtering, and killed the animal with one shot.

Snow Flurry—for a Minute—in Waltham

Big White Flakes on Moody Street—and it was 80 in the Shade Yesterday.

There was a minute's snow flurry in Waltham this morning. Yes, "oh yes!" Lasted all of a minute, said the flurries. Many who were out with the white crystals before the fall stopped.

What's that? Yes, yes, we know it was so in the shade yesterday. What difference does that make? Man, this is Boston. Anything's possible here—fast as a weather's concerned.

If you don't believe it, ask its weather man. We did, and this is what he said: "Well, anything's possible. It's 39 below, and I never saw snow above 32 degrees. But I wouldn't say it was too possible in Boston."

Wilson to Name Him Special Counsel, Despite Political Considerations.

WILL AID HIS CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House today as practically certain that Francis J. Henry, the San Francisco prosecutor, who convicted Alvin Karpis and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs Committee white slave case.

The only doubt as to Henry's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is believed that the coming will greatly damage the Democratic campaign.

WOMAN JAILED AS FAIR MISS GREVILLE WEDS

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened by a married Sir Joseph Greville, was today without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by a married Sir Joseph Greville, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Greville, chairman of the Greville family, and later declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Greville, who was mysteriously disappeared nearly a half century ago and about whose absence a romantic road of mystery had been woven.

Greville, in 1888 claimed to be Roger Greville and demanded the title and estates of the Greville family. He came from Australia and the Greville family, being convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. This case a long and celebrated trial, but Greville's case was nullified and he was subsequently convicted of perjury and sent to jail for four years.

Greville died in 1898 after completing his term, but before he passed away he made a confession in which he admitted he had been a partner in the Greville family of London's East End. The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

New Haven Patrons Scared, Quit Train

NORWALK, Ct., June 25.—One of the New Haven road's Pacific engines, No. 1,328, drawing the Connecticut River express, blew out a cylinder head while crossing the Norwalk river bridge. No one was hurt, but there was considerable excitement, the steam engine the train as it came bounding to a stop. As the passengers saw the water far below, they were terrified. Through the main bridge an express dived on May 4, 1902 and more than fifty passengers lost their lives. At Stamford, many quit the train.

Com. Caminetti Aided Bryan on California Alien Land Bill

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION CAMINETTI, father of the man who stands indicted for violation of the Mann act, in his official capacity will have to pass upon many "white slave" deportation cases. This fact has been commented upon much since his son's indictment, and the influences shown to prevent his trial.

His appointment to the position of Commissioner of Immigration was without protest, and it was not generally considered a good one in California. It was regarded as a reward for the support that Senator Caminetti gave to the administration, and particularly to William A. Bryan at the time of the agitation in regard to the alien land bill.

Caminetti entertained Secretary Bryan while he was in California at the time of the alien land agitation, and denounced Roosevelt for his stick methods in coercing California when he was President. He contrasted Roosevelt's methods with those of the Wilson administration on a similar occasion.

In the State Senate Caminetti argued long for the Curtin resolution, one of delay, but admitted that the State had a right to do as it pleased. He finally voted for the bill.

Charles Marshall Storey and his wife, who was Susan Jones, were married yesterday, will leave at once for a summer in Europe. They were married at the First Baptist Church in Brookline, Mass. (The son of Marshall Storey, the attorney, his wife being the daughter of Mr. Frank E. Storey.)

She was given away by her brother, Frank E. Storey, and was attended by the Rev. Mr. Kenneth M. Storey, a minister of the First Baptist Church, Brookline, Mass. The bride was Miss Ellen L. Until it becomes the custom for men to adopt for general wear the cool kimono of Japan, the average American will continue to get his summer comfort out of the popular two-piece outing suit.

Our showing of these garments includes qualities that range in cost from $10 to $20. Especially attractive are the

Silk-Lined Outing Suits

AT $15

The fabrics are gray homespuns, light gray and tan soft crashees.

The coats are three-button models, with soft roll fronts, half and quarter-lined with silk of a special quality, woven exclusively for light wear apparel. They are built to hold their shape, but have only a minimum amount of padding. Some have patch pockets.

The excellence of Morse-Made Clothing is plainly evident in the character of the tailoring that lifts these suits to a level far above the ordinary outing suits.

At the same price ($15) we show half-lined two-piece Norfolk Suits, in three distinct models—excelsior, knife-pleated, box pleated and open half-inch welt seams. Some have belt, others, or sewed on 3/4 belts, some have yokes, others have four patch pockets, split sleeves; genuine Canadian homespuns among them.

Filene's FOR TOMORROW AND FRIDAY Filene's

We Have Planned a Friend-Making Sale of

Misses' Filene Machine-Made Dresses

Giving Even Greater Value at Each Price Than the Everyday Remarkable Values That Have Made This Filene Specialty Famous

The same manufacturing resources that work with us every day, designing, planning and scheming to produce at little money dresses with all the style and chic of expensive gowns, have cheerfully co-operated in this effort to do even greater things. By working ahead, picking up materials at bargain prices, and trimming an already close margin of profit, the trick has been done.

The dresses are here, fresh and clean from the machines, in styles and materials that are in demand RIGHT NOW. We picture some of them. Take our word for it that the others are quite as attractive in style and quality.

Sizes are 14, 16 and 18—which will fit many women of mature years as well as the young women for whom they are intended.

$2 Dresses at $1

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston Pilgrims will clash with the Giants in two battles today and two red hot battles are expected. The Boston team did not show to advantage in the recent series with the Phillies, but the players are confident that they will at least get an even break with the Giants today.

McKee is anxious to improve the record of his club at the expense of the visitors. The latter general belief in the Pilgrims, McKee believes that the Pilgrims will get the best everything will be clear sailing.

McKee will probably perform in the box for Boston in both games today.

Eddie Campi Wins Over Charlie Lehoux

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 25.—Eddie Campi, San Francisco amateur, won a six round decision last night over Charlie Lehoux, the Boston champion of France, after twenty rounds of the hardest fighting ever seen in the Victoria arena.

The scrapers were at it from the first round to the last, and each was getting the best of the other. At the end of the fight Lehoux was a bloody mess, and Campi was a bloody mess.

Marty O'Brien Gets $1,000 Damages

JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 25.—Marty O'Brien, a thirty-two year old, has been awarded a verdict of $1,000 damages against the Erie Railroad because one of the directors was hit by a train.

O'Brien was hit by a train on the Erie Railroad, and the jury found that the railroad was liable for the damages.

George H. Crocker Is an Ardent Golfer

There isn't a more ardent golfer in the country than George H. Crocker of Boston, and he is a very good one. Every journey of any importance has kept him near the green of the golf course.

Lately he has been playing at the Boston Golf Club, and he is a very good player.

O'Brien Outpointed.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Paddy Sullivan, the veteran, easily outpointed Frank O'Brien, the Bostoner, in a ten round fight last night.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

AT TING on the orders of the kind hearted sporting editor, the writer furnished the readers of the Boston AMERICAN with an article that was intended to be in praise of the Boston Nationals. Said article dwelt on the recent good work of the team and called attention to the fact that it had won ten out of eighteen games on the Western trip and now that they were back on home grounds great things were expected.

What happened?

The Boston Nationals opened up with the Phillies in a four game series and lost all four games, showing some of the worst ball of the year. The pitchers couldn't pitch, the batters couldn't bat, and the team couldn't win.

The result of this story is obvious.

THE Boston Nationals are in New York today, where they are scheduled to play the Phillies in a double-header today and tomorrow. The Boston team did not show to advantage in the recent series with the Phillies, but the players are confident that they will at least get an even break with the Giants today.

McKee is anxious to improve the record of his club at the expense of the visitors. The latter general belief in the Pilgrims, McKee believes that the Pilgrims will get the best everything will be clear sailing.

McKee will probably perform in the box for Boston in both games today.

GEORGE TYLER, the Frank McKee pitcher, contributed a little sketch at the opening of the last game between the Boston and Philadelphia teams entitled "Silence and Double-headers." The sketch was a little bit of a joke, but it was a good one.

The sketch was a little bit of a joke, but it was a good one.

BASEBALL CHATTER

The plan of Frank McKee, manager of the Athletics, to send infielder Claude Ransom to the Rochester, N. Y. team, has been held back by Connie Mack of the Athletics, who refuses to waive on Ransom.

John McGraw of the Giants and Joe Tinker of the Cubs are out with complete denial of the report that Burns, the Boston pitcher, would be traded to the Red Sox.

Manager Brannaman of the Naps has asked the Major League to let Walter Johnson, c. team and Pinner Swinnell to the New York Yankees.

The thoughts of John McGraw have been on the subject of the Boston Nationals. He has been thinking about the team and how they are doing.

In the American League, take it in "Jaws," the Athletics have the pennant already won and nothing is left to be done.

One of the strangest games on record was played in St. Louis when the Cardinals won by a score of 20 to 0.

Trials Inconvenience the Guilty, Always

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor, in assuming the responsibility for the postponement of the Duggs-Cammetti "white slave" prosecutions, remarks: "It is nothing unusual for the District Attorney or the Attorney-General to grant a postponement of trial of such cases when an immediate trial would seriously inconvenience either party."

An immediate trial of a criminal case, when the evidence is overwhelming and before the mouths of witnesses have been stopped, IS ALWAYS SERIOUSLY INCONVENIENT TO ONE OF THE PARTIES.

The party to whom an immediate trial of a hideous "white-slave" case is ALWAYS seriously inconvenient is the accused.

In these cases the Attorney-General had been expressly warned by the Federal District Attorney for Northern California that an immediate trial would be PARTICULARLY inconvenient to the accused and that their friends were boasting that their influential relatives would get a delay, possibly a testimony-killing delay, in Washington.

AND THEY DID!

It is suggested that the postponement was ordered by the Attorney-General against the protest of the California District Attorney for a "humane reason," namely, that Mr. A. Cammetti, the newly-appointed Commissioner-General of Immigration, might be present at the trial of his son. Was ever a POOR man's trial postponed against the wishes of the prosecuting attorney for such a reason?

The whole country must sympathize with Mr. Cammetti, but much wider "humane reasons" are involved than his admirable desire to stand by a grown-up and married son in a court of justice.

The Mann "white slave" act was passed for "humane reasons" after revelations that angered every decent man and woman in every State in the Union. These "humane reasons" were so much more appalling than any possible individual suffering on the part of Mr. Cammetti that both the Secretary of Labor and the Attorney-General have clearly shown a pitiful lack of proportion in their judgment of what was due to Mr. Cammetti and what was due to the public who have demanded that this "white slave" canker be cut out.

The resignation of Mr. John L. McNab, Federal District Attorney in California, SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED by the President.

Nor will the public feel assured that the ordinary course of justice in the Federal courts throughout the country cannot be interrupted from Washington by the private representations of friends of accused persons, when they are rich or influential enough. SO LONG AS MR. McREYNOLDS REMAINS ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES.

A New Treaty with England

The general arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States expired on June 5.

It has not been renewed by the Senate, and the present attitude of Senators indicates that it will not be renewed in its present shape.

In point of fact, Great Britain has made arbitration treaties in general unpopular by reason of its half arrogant and altogether selfish demand for full trade equality in the Canal which we have built on our own territory and with our own money, and must repair when necessary and defend always out of our own resources.

Nevertheless, there should be a peace treaty with England. There should be now and always the most friendly relations between England and this country—the two great English-speaking nations of the world.

But a new treaty certainly should not be negotiated under the superior consideration of England's selfish interests.

The Senate can be safely trusted to see to this. The clause in the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise vessels from the payment of tolls through the Canal, in spite of the most strenuous Treasury opposition, was passed by 44 to 11.

The pending treaty must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

The expiration of the present treaty has solved a serious problem raised by England's contention over the canal rates. It is far better that it should remain solved.

If England thinks that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty allows her to interfere with America's right to send its shipping free through the Panama Canal, then the arbitration treaty which might be interpreted as submitting this issue to arbitration ought not to be renewed, and no other treaty should be negotiated that contains a provision open to such construction or misconstruction.

America has no desire to entertain any other than the most friendly relations with Great Britain. But these relations, if they are to be permanent, must be maintained with due consideration for our own rights and interests and dignity.

It is desirable and necessary that there should be a fair and honorable new treaty with England.

And no American body is better prepared by the record to negotiate such a treaty than the Sixty-third Senate, which appears to be representatively American and patriotically discreet.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Mrs. Van de Water, whose stories of marriage, mishaps and misadventure have won for her a wide readership, begins in the following chapter a new series of observations. It will be continued in the AMERICAN, with two or more installments each week.

CHAPTER I.

MARY DORRIST signed in a restaurant and emerged at the crowded subway car came to a standstill with a violent jolt and jar. The man next to her uttered an unintelligible exclamation and glanced at her anxiously. The girl knew that she had trodden on his foot, but she did not venture an apology.

She released her hold on the strap long enough to take a handkerchief from her handbag and wipe her damp face. The train was disagreeably warm. It was the afternoon rush hour and the car was packed to its utmost capacity. The air was dead, and it nauseated the girl slightly. The strong odor of perspiration humbly assailed her nostrils, and the whirling fans on the ceiling only served to beat the overheated atmosphere into her face. Her right arm was numb from clinging to the support above her, while her left ached with the weight of the books she carried.

The express started again with a sudden jerk, and she was thrust again against the man behind her. This time she heard only too plainly what he said, but she pretended not to hear. She was not used to being crowded, and she was not about to let her temper get the best of her. Even in the high, well-ventilated schoolroom the atmosphere had been bad. This was surely one of those days in which everything goes wrong, and she was not about to let her temper get the best of her. She had been reprimanded for inattention. She had botched a recitation in mathematics, usually her easiest subject. She was worn and irritable, and remembered with a bitter heart that there would be no respite for her tomorrow. Monthly examinations were due, and she was cramming far into the night. Once more she shifted and shifted her load of books from one arm to the other. Nothing in the world seemed cheering or encouraging. She was unhappy and half sick.

The express, starting along between stations, was gradually overtaking a local train. The slower cars were, for a minute, even with the express, and Mary gazed absently through the windows of the car speeding along scarcely four feet away. A young, fresh-faced man in a gray suit and slouch hat stood in the aisle of the local. His eyes met the girl's eyes, and he smiled in frank amusement at the encounter. The girl was suddenly aware of the look, but she did not smile in return, yet she forgot for a second that she was uncomfortably warm and that her books were heavy.

Suddenly she started and leaned closer toward the window through which she was gazing at the local passengers. The man caught her eyes again, and smiled cheerfully, then his look changed to one of bewilderment as the girl in the express made a warning, frightened gesture. She was a queer creature, he decided, and although he still smiled, he shrugged his shoulders. The pantomime had taken but a few seconds, then the express drew slowly away from the local, and the man in gray had slipped behind, out of sight.

Gordon Craig of Texas rubbed his forehead in perplexity, glancing about him. The car was full of stolid, self-centered people, for at this hour even the local trains are crowded. Most of the passengers were absorbed in their newspapers or were staring vacuously at nothing. Craig could see no reason why a pretty girl in another train should be started into making a violent gesture to him, a complete stranger to her. He glanced down at his well-tightened clothes, took off his hat and looked at it twofold, then dropped his eyes to his polished boots. He could, however, see no reason why a girl in a New York car should be started into making a violent gesture to him, a complete stranger to her. He glanced down at his well-tightened clothes, took off his hat and looked at it twofold, then dropped his eyes to his polished boots. He could, however, see no reason why a girl in a New York car should be started into making a violent gesture to him, a complete stranger to her. The Woman Who Wants a Career

By DOBOTHY DIX

KNOW a woman who is one of the darlings of the gods upon whom no harsh wind of fate has ever blown. In addition, she is a woman who is herself, sweet and lovely in every relationship of life.

She is beautiful, intelligent, and high minded, a beloved figure in her own home and in society. She is married to one of nature's noblest, who has been the tenderest and the kindest of husbands, and she has repaid his devotion with an equal affection and has been to him an ideal wife. She has borne and raised a family of splendid children. She is a fine housekeeper and has made her home not only a haven of rest for her own but a temple of refuge for strangers.

You could not conceive of a fuller or a more useful life than this woman has led, and yet she is consumed with a burning ambition to achieve something outside of her home, to do something that will bring her in some money that she has absolutely earned herself and that does not come to her from her husband's pocket.

She Shakes Her Head

When you say to her that to have made a beautiful home, to have been a good wife and made a man happy, and to have reared six children is the greatest work any woman could possibly do, and an achievement that goes down in the writing of a popular novel, or a play that runs a hundred nights, or a picture that gets hung in an art gallery, she shakes her head. "I want to do something that will make my husband and children proud of me," she says. "I want to do something that will justify my friends' affection for me."

And you talk to dear Mrs. Jones when you try to make her see that she is more to her husband and her children, just as she is, than if she were the most famous woman in the world, and that all that her friends ask of her is just to be what she is.

So this woman who is so blessed, and who blesses so many, in the domestic relationship, misses the fine flower of happiness which should be hers because she has no sense of achievement, no thrill of victory, no realization of a great work well done. Instead she is tormented by an incessant longing to do something that will have a public recognition and a price tag attached to it.

Attitude Not Peculiar

Nor is her attitude toward her life work peculiar. It is practically universal among women. The women who are most envied are not the women with the best husbands, the finest homes and the most beautiful children. They are the women who are successful in their careers. Every woman who is before the public knows what it is to have the admiration of other women, and who are well married, who are handsomely dressed and have fine social positions, come to her and say that they wish "they could do something like you."

"But," says the working woman, "you have your husband and children and home. Goodness knows, to take care of them is enough to keep any woman hustling."

"Oh, yes," responds the domestic wife, "I am kept busy about eighteen hours a day, but I wish I could do something that counted, something worth while."

And there's no use arguing with her and trying to make her see that there is no other profession in the world that requires such varied attainments and such skill and energy, and that wearing of a family, and the making of a real home. Nor is there any other work on earth so important.

Nothing More Pathetic

There is nothing more pathetic than that women have so little pride in their great work to which they are called by nature, but the reason of it is not hard to explain.

It is because wifehood and motherhood and the making of a home are such heavy responsibilities, and that the woman who takes the world that is not considered to be worth some definite recompense as its own reward. The salesgirl is paid for her labor. The stenographer draws her salary. The actress, the singer, the newspaper woman, all have their weekly checks as a return for the service they have given, but the wife and mother gets only her board and clothes, and these are supposed to be given to her through the generosity of her husband, not as a reward for her work.

No other laborer toils so many hours as the wife and mother, no one has such heavy responsibilities, and yet the woman who works her fingers to the bone cooking and washing, and baby tending, is shewn of no being "supported" by the man for whom she does all of this incredible toil, and even the census report deifies her a place in the list of working women.

Never Has a Dollar

In the majority of households the wife and mother never has a dollar of her own that she can spend as she pleases. Often she can run up extravagant bills, but the work of wife and mother and home maker by withholding their praise.

The domestic woman's angel of fame is her husband. He is crown her with laurel and oak. And when she has no money, until he has it carried on her tombstone. Which is a little late.

It is not in rare cases that a man is just enough to turn over to his wife the money that he makes for her. It is a man's job to feel that she has earned, and that she may spend as she freely as the woman spends the money that she earns outside of the house. It is men who have taught women to have a contempt for the work of wife and mother and home maker by withholding their praise. The domestic woman's angel of fame is her husband. He is crown her with laurel and oak. And when she has no money, until he has it carried on her tombstone. Which is a little late.

THE OTHERS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

ONE is the pride of the college, Handsome and sunny and clever, Joking while gathering knowledge, Slaving and worrying never a day, Baseball and football and rowing, Sanserit and Latin and Greek— Dazed by his wonderful showing, All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels, Brilliant and able and full of life, Proof against foes and their arrows, Crushing them all with a breath. Much as a baby blows bubbles, One leaps along in the race, Laughing at heartaches and troubles All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others, Hewing their pathway through life— All the less fortunate brothers, Comrades of sorrow and strife, Standing by the Union and rebel troops, Strangers to Fame and its pride, Here's to the patiently groggy! Here's to the thousands that tried!

The battle of Gettysburg was fought fifty years ago. The anniversary will be celebrated this Summer.

THE AMERICAN has secured a limited edition of a "Gettysburg Memorial" volume. It contains photographs of every event of importance during the Three Days' Battle of Gettysburg, and every important position of the Union and rebel troops. There are photographs of many of the details of the battle. All printed on glazed paper, from exceptionally fine halftones.

You can secure the Memorial for a coupon clipped from the Sunday AMERICAN and five cents.
